CITY VIEWS

The Best of Temple City's
2019 Photo Contest

OCTOBER 2019

There are two kinds of views. There are those that communicate what we feel and think. And there are the ones we take in with our eyes. This unique collection of over 50 photographs—the best of dozens submitted by Temple Citians to our 2019 Photo Contest—encompasses both types of views. In other words, these photographs are a visual expression of what Temple Citians think and feel embodies the spirit of our great city.

The contest's subject matter was open. Entries could focus on our history, community life, open space, recreation, arts, culture and so on. They could spotlight something major, like the Camellia Festival, or something magical, like a giant teapot suspended in midair, spouting water into a fountain. Their centerpiece could be a solitary white camellia flower, or a senior couple dancing until dusk. It could be a fleeting moment—an improbable sunset or a pole vaulter defying gravity.

We expected a modest number of entries from a handful of photography buffs (after all, this was our very first contest). What we got exceeded our expectations: 150 photos from 49 people. The winners were not easy to choose; the quality of the work was impressive, the range of subjects comprehensive. Each submission conveyed its own special view and perspective, compelling us not to look away.

And so this book was born. The photographs collected here form a dynamic and thriving mosaic. They capture the spirit of Temple City in the best of ways: the one that only Temple Citians can.
